Hello,

Northern Colorado Wrestling Club athlete Andrew Alirez has continued to have success on the national stage this spring. In April he went to the UWW Junior National Championships in Las Vegas to compete against many of the best high school and college wrestlers in the country. He went 6-1 on the weekend and finished in 2nd place. This tournament qualified him for the UWW Junior World Team Trials this past weekend in Raleigh, NC. Andrew went 3-1 on the weekend and came away with the bronze. In addition to Andrew's accomplishments on the mat this spring, he also finished the season ranked #1 overall prospect in the country and received the 2019 Junior Hodge Trophy, awarded annually to the most dominant high school wrestler in the country. He will attend the University of Northern Colorado in the fall. Financial support from donors like you allow wrestlers like Andrew the opportunity to compete in these events and pursue their goal of winning World and Olympic medals!
